News from the Texas Nipe's...

I know that usually this newspaper isn't published until the Christmas holiday season, but many events in the last several months warrant a special edition. There will still be one sent out during the holidays, so if you need newsprint to wrap fish (or chips), you'll get some extra this year.

Teenage News.

This column used to be just for Danielle, but in March, David became one too. Now there are two of them in the house. So, I'll deal with them in chronological order. Danielle is currently working her second job. She started out as a drink hostess in the Golden Corral Restaurant, but that job didn't work out. Now she is a salesperson (I believe that is politically correct) for Bealls clothing store. I suspect she'll use all her wages to patronize her employer. She's able to drive herself to work when she can get Mom and Dad to lend her the car. David has about 3 girls a day calling here at the house. He spends a good deal of his time at the pool since school let out for the summer. He also has found gainful employment, serving as a babysitter for two different neighbors for four days each week.

Filler

A word aptly spoken is like apples of gold in settings of silver. Proverbs 25:11.

Job scene

I know that many of you are probably wondering how John is making out with all the layoffs going on at IBM. Well, sad to say, what appeared to be the worst has happened. However he has found a new job as a contract programmer that promises to be quite long term and can testify that GOD still hears the prayers of HIS people.

School Days.

Before John found a new job, Geri decided that she might have to go back to work as a Registered Nurse. Since she hadn't practiced her profession for 16 years, the great state of Texas deemed that she needed to take a refresher course. In the course of signing up for this course at Texas Women's University (which is a Co-Ed institution believe it or not), she has become enrolled as a Sophomore. It isn't known yet whether or not she'll continue after this summer, so stay tuned for the Christmas newsletter.
